LIGHT BEHIND THE CLOUDS.

BY H. W. LONGFELLOW.

We should remember, in these dark days, that there is no cloud without a sun behind it. And the sun will shine ere long. Clouds do not last long.

The day is cold, and dark and dreary;
It rains, and the wind is never weary;
The vine still clings to the mouldering wall,
But at every gust the dead leaves fall.

And the day is dark and dreary, My life is cold, and dark and dreary;
It rains, and the wind is never weary;
My thoughts still cling to the mouldering Past, But the hopes of youth fall thick in the track,
And the days are dark and dreary.

Be still, and heart; and cease repining;
Behind the clouds is the sun still shining;
The fate is the common fate of all—Into each life some rain must fall.

Some days must be dark and dreary.

Who was the Goose?

In Harpers drawer we find the following

"Goose" story: A bashful gentleman, of Holly Springs, Mississippi, took a violent "hankering" after a fair seamstress of the town; and after a great deal of hesitation, finally brought his courage up to the sticking point, and made an evening call on the lady. He found her busily engaged at her work, pressing off a garment with a tailor's goose. She, however, received him courteously, and continued her work. A bevy of the seamstress's female friends dropped in a few minutes after our heroic friend had subsidized into silence, for he found it absolutely impossible to maintain a conversation with the lady. The sudden entrance of the visitors, instead of relieving, only added to his embarrassment, and he sat in silence until his own situation became painful to all, but to none more than himself. All efforts to draw him into conversation proved abor-ative, and it became a matter of serious concern to the ladies how to relieve his embarassment without a catastrophe, for he was well known to all of them as a gentleman of great worth, his shyness being his only frailty. The seamstress finally got through with her work, and called out to the negro man in the kitchen:

"John!"

"The door opened, and a stout, burly negro stuck his head through the door, and said:

"I is here, Missus."

"John, will you take this goose out?"

"Our bashful friend sprang to his feet in an instant, and exclaimed:

"I beg your pardon, Madam, for intruding on you, but I'll go out myself!"

After having been severely tried, even by "Fire," the meanwhile, he had gathered his hat and made his exit, which was followed by the frantic yells of the girls. I am sorry to add that that little misunderstanding made an old bachelor and an old maid.

MURDER AND RETALIATION.—The St

Joseph Herald of the 21st ult., gives the following description of the operation of mob law at Atchison, Kansas, from the relation of an eye-witness:—

"An old man was recently murdered named Kelsey. Some ten or twelve men have been arrested for the crime, some of whom have been hung by the citizens of Atchison. Tuesday afternoon about forty of the Atchison people were in the street, accompanying a cart containing two men.

The cart was driven about a quarter of a mile from the town, and halted under an elm tree. The two men were pinioned, two ropes were tied to a limb of the tree, and the men were about to be launched into eternity, when a gentleman put a motion to the crowd, which by that time numbered about one hundred and fifty, that the prisoners be allowed ten minutes in which to say whatever they desired.

This motion was sustained by the citizens, and an old man arose from the cart and related all the facts connected with the murder of Kelsey, insisting that he was forced to go with the gang which murdered him, and that he was innocent of all intention to murder. At the close, a resolution was offered that the hanging of be postponed to Saturday, and that a new trial be granted to the old man. The culprit whose name was Mooney, was crying bitterly, but one-half of the crowd cried 'Hang him! hang him!' while others cried, 'Take him off.'

The crowd rushed to the cart, and carried off the old man, and finally got him back to the jail. The young man, McCarthy, was promptly swung up—never having been tried for the crime. Mooney escaped to Missouri a few days ago, but was captured and carried back to Atchison Monday night.

As our informant was leaving Atchison, the citizens were holding another meeting in the streets, at which it was resolved to hang Mooney, and the crowd had rushed to the jail to carry out the resolution. These are terrible times.

"SHUTTING UP SHOP."—There was once a young counter-jumper who forsook his calling, and made up his mind to become a printer. He stood up, "studying out" the boxes, under the direction of the foreman, pretty well all day; but when his tedious ten hours had rolled around, the foreman politely informed him that our excellent

State laws permitted a person to quit work at six o'clock.

"Well then," said our young hopeful, "I guess I'll shut up shop," and, suiting action to find, he deliberately pulled his upper-case over the lower, effectually piling each. The foreman came to the conclusion that the youth was "out of his time" the next morning, and told him he had made a bad selection of trades in choosing the "art preservative."

AN ANCIENT COPPERHEAD SILENCED

BY WASHINGTON IRVING.—Irving was descending the Hudson on the steamboat when the tidings of the triumphant entry of the British into Washington, and the acts of uncivilized hostility which followed, first reached him. It was night, and the passengers had betaken themselves to their beds to rest, when a person came on board at Poughkeepsie with the news of the inglorious triumph, and proceeded in the darkness of the cabin to relate the particulars.—The destruction of the President's house, the treachery, war and navy offices, the capitol, the depository of the national library and public records. There was a momentary pause after the speaker had ceased, when some paltry spirit lifted his head from his settee, and in a tone of complacent derision "wondered what Jimmy Madison would say now." "Sir," said

Mr Irving, glad of an escape to his swelling indignation, "do you seize on such a dissier only for a sneer? Let me tell you, sir, it is not a question about Jimmy Madison or Jiminy Armstrong. The pride and honor of the nation are wounded; the country is insulted and disgraced by the
